

switch

This switch controls the connection and disconnection of power between the battery and the robot. Since the rules require cutting off power before operation, we added this switch to comply with that. We soldered the red (positive) wire to the input side of the switch and another red wire to the output side. When the switch is turned on, power flows from the battery to the step-down module and then to the rest of the robot's components

